PART 3. PROJECT OVERVIEW

3.1 General Information about CMEC, CCMEC, and CICIC

Council of Ministers of Education, Canada (CMEC)

The Council of Ministers of Education, Canada (CMEC), is an intergovernmental body founded in 1967 by ministers of education to serve as:

- (a) a forum to discuss policy issues;
- (b) a mechanism through which to undertake activities, projects, and initiatives in areas of mutual interest;
- (c) a means by which to consult and cooperate with national education organizations and the federal government; and
- (d) an instrument to represent the education interests of the provinces and territories internationally.

CMEC provides leadership in education at the pan-Canadian and international levels and contributes to the fulfillment of the constitutional responsibility for education conferred on the provinces and territories.

The Corporation of the Council of Ministers of Education, Canada (CCMEC)

The Corporation of the Council of Ministers of Education, Canada (CCMEC), is the corporate arm of CMEC and is the legal contracting authority for CMEC under this RFP and also for any Agreement that may be entered into pursuant to this RFP.

Canadian Information Centre for International Credentials (CICIC)

The Canadian Information Centre for International Credentials (CICIC) is a unit operated under CMEC. CICIC was established in 1990 by the provinces and territories, through CMEC and the federal government, as a national body mandated to provide information about Canada's education systems and to work toward the application of the UNESCO Convention on the Recognition of Studies, Diplomas and Degrees concerning Higher Education in the States belonging to the Europe Region. CICIC collects, organizes, and distributes information and also acts as a national clearing house and referral service to support the recognition and portability of Canadian and international educational and occupational qualifications.

In this capacity, CICIC's current mandate is as follows:

- a) to establish and coordinate an information network of individuals and agencies involved in international recognition of foreign qualifications that builds upon and enhances existing provincial/territorial, professional, and educational networks;
- b) to facilitate access to information about foreign credentials and foreign recognition activities for Canadian authorities and organizations;
- c) to gather and disseminate information about domestic and international certification procedures and recognition systems;
- d) to refer requests regarding the recognition of credentials to appropriate Canadian or international bodies;
- e) to establish liaison with relevant international organizations and participate, as appropriate, in the implementation of international agreements in the field of foreign credentials and qualifications; and
- f) to provide information about Canadian postsecondary education in order to promote mobility and the recognition of Canadian qualifications abroad.

Each year, CICIC undertakes a wide range of activities to support this mandate and to provide ongoing networking and advocacy in the field of foreign -credential and -qualification recognition, in both pan-Canadian and international contexts.

3.2 Project Background

In 2007, CICIC, in partnership with the Alliance of Credential Evaluation Services of Canada (ACESC) and with funding provided through Human Resources and Skills Development Canada's (HRSDC) Foreign Credential Recognition Program, embarked on a project entitled the Pan-Canadian Quality Standards in International Credential Evaluation. The purpose of the project was to provide for a diagnostic study to investigate the consistency and portability of academic assessments conducted in Canada. To this end, consultations with stakeholders (some of whom are both assessors and end users), quantitative and qualitative surveys, and a series of focus groups with the immigrant clients and end users of academic-credential assessments were performed between November 2007 and May 2008.

Diagnostic research indicated that there was both a need and an opportunity for improved dialogue among academic-credential assessment services and for improved access to these services for immigrant clients. Feedback by the project's working group, as well by other stakeholders consulted in the research phase, suggested that future initiatives aimed at the creation of pan-Canadian standards, greater networking and training opportunities, improved information sharing, and joint research projects can help effect positive change in this area. More information about the project can be found at <http://cicic.ca/docs/2009-report-standards-evaluations.en.pdf>.

Based on these findings, a number of recommendations have been proffered. In April 2010, with new funding provided through HRSDC, CICIC undertook a follow-up phase of this project, with outcomes focusing on these recommendations. The objectives of the follow-up phase are as follows:

- Cross-reference the terminology and definitions used by academic-credential assessment agencies and other organizations that evaluate international credentials.
- Provide networking and workshop opportunities to credential evaluators from across Canada.
- Develop, on a trial basis, a set of “made-in-Canada” reference country profiles for assessors to use when determining the comparability of an internationally obtained academic credential.
- Research the feasibility of developing an on-line program specifically designed for existing credential assessors and for individuals interested in a career in credential evaluation.
- Develop a pan-Canadian Quality Assurance Framework (QAF) to serve as a reference tool for all groups that perform academic-credential assessments in Canada.
- Improve the profile of ACESC and the practice of academic-credential assessment in general.
- Carry out a needs and issues analysis regarding the possible development of a pan-Canadian database, to facilitate evaluations and better help new immigrants arriving or already in Canada.

At the core of this project is the goal of improving the consistency and portability of academic-credential assessments, through the introduction of pan-Canadian standards.

3.3 Objectives of Work to be Done

At the National Workshop of Credential Evaluators in December 2007, some organizations noted that they had to rely on third-party references because of a lack of internal resources. Academic assessors also concluded that results would be more consistent if all assessors used the same set of references. However, no standard, pan-Canadian references exist to which all groups can refer. Assessors therefore suggested the creation of a database where current information on international education systems and best practices could be consolidated and shared on a regular basis.

Many benefits are associated with a common database for academic credential assessments; however, there are also issues associated with the creation of such a database. For example, there are legal implications related to sharing information that organisations have acquired over the years. The reliability of sources is also of concern. Finally, it is not yet clear that all academic credential evaluation services would be willing to contribute to such a database.

In an effort to improve the consistency of evaluation outcomes for both the immigrant clients and the institutional end users of academic assessments, CICIC, under the aegis of CMEC, is inviting proposals to examine the feasibility of sharing existing information on assessment results, resources, and methodologies through a Web-based application. The application must not necessitate the creation of a centralized database.

3.4 Working group

A working group made up of volunteer members from various backgrounds within the academic credential community has been created to provide overall direction for the project.

PART 4. REQUIREMENTS FOR THE WORK TO BE DONE

4.1 Tasks

The Project ("Project") consists of the following steps and tasks.

The successful Proponent will be expected to:

- (a) participate in the meeting of the working group in April 2011 (date and location to be determined). The successful Proponent will present his/her work plan and take this opportunity to seek guidance from the working group;
- (b) research and assess existing national and international databases used for academic credential evaluation purposes;
- (c) collect opinions and feedback from groups that perform academic credential evaluation to assess the benefits and the willingness of sharing information related to the practice of academic credential evaluation;
- (d) identify the type of information that could be shared for the benefit of all academic credential evaluators;
- (e) explore the practical aspect of creating the Web-based application and the sustainability of such an approach;
- (f) prepare a report based on the findings, with recommendations regarding a workable model for the Web-based application;
- (g) present the findings at the National Workshop of Credential Assessors to be held in the summer of 2011 (location to be determined).

4.2 Scope of the Work

The scope of the Project is as follows:

- (a) explore the current state of academic credential assessment information gathering across Canada, including current capability, capacity, resources, and data collection and utilization procedures, including the structure and use of electronic databases;
- (b) determine the interest and willingness of organizations that perform academic credentials assessments in participating in and contributing to a Web-based approach to sharing their assessment results, resources and methodologies with others.

- (c) identify the data gaps where the current environment is insufficient to meet the requirements for the implementation of a Web-based application, and propose solutions;
- (d) develop an issues and needs analysis regarding the feasibility for governments, assessment agencies, colleges, universities, regulatory bodies, etc., to share assessment results, resources and methodologies, with a summary and evaluation of current gaps, inherent risks, decision makers' most critical needs, and current challenges and opportunities;
- (e) recommended a workable model, taking into account intellectual property rights, implementation issues, long-term sustainability, budgetary considerations, and other elements identified by the consultant in collaboration with the working group.

PART 5. GOVERNANCE AND PROCESS

5.1 Project Manager

The work will be managed by CCMEC'S appointed Project Manager, to whom the Proponent will report. The Project Manager and the Working Group will monitor the work done by the Proponent and will provide the Proponent with the necessary guidance, instructions, background, and source materials to undertake the work.

5.2 Delivery Timeframe
